

Rhinosinusitis in children and asthma severity

Pawankar, Ruby  and Zernotti, Mario Emilio  (2009) Rhinosinusitis in children and asthma severity. Current Opinion in Allergy and Clinical Immunology, 9 (2). pp. 151-153. ISSN 1528-4050

El texto completo no está disponible en este repositorio.

Resumen

Severe asthma is uncommon in childhood, but there is compelling evidence showing that the most severe asthma is closely associated to upper respiratory illness, especially rhinosinusitis. Treatment of chronic rhinosinusitis, medical or surgical or both, benefits concomitant asthma and has been shown to reduce the severity of asthma.

Tipo de documento:

Artículo

DOI:

<https://doi.org/10.1097/ACI.0b013e328329221d>

Palabras clave:

Asthma severity. Rhinosinusitis in children. Rhinosinusitis treatment. Upper respiratory illness.

Temas:

R Medicina > RF Otorrinolaringología

Unidad académica:

Universidad Católica de Córdoba > Facultad de Ciencias de la Salud